

Contributors

Kathy Cremin teaches at Bradford University and is a Literature & Reader Development Officer for Bradford Council. Her research focuses on gender and Irish writing and she is currently writing a study of Maeve Binchy for Liffey Press (forthcoming).

Marcella Edwards recently completed a doctorate on Contemporary Poetry and the Politics of Publishing in Ireland in the 1960s. She is now an Editor at Harvill Press, London.

Eibhlín Evans is an independent scholar of Anglo-Irish writing. She has published essays and articles on Irish writers, chiefly poets. She is a regular reviewer for Poetry Review and is also a published poet.

Helen Kidd is a Lecturer in Literature and Creative Writing at Oxford Brookes University. She has published widely on contemporary poetry and is also an award-winning poet.

Mary King is visiting Professor at The Centre for Irish Studies, Goldsmiths College, London. Her publications on Irish drama include The Drama of J.M.Synge (Fourth Estate, Syracuse University Press, 1985).

Richard Kirkland is a Lecturer in English and Irish Studies at The University of Manchester. His publications include Literature and Culture in Northern Ireland Since 1965: Moments of Danger (Longman, 1996) and Identity Parades: Northern Irish Culture & Dissident Subjects (Liverpool University Press, 2002).

Steven Matthews is Chair of English Studies and Director of the Centre for Modern and Contemporary Poetry at Oxford Brookes University. He is the author of several books on poetry including Irish Poetry: Politics, History, Negotiation (Macmillan, 1997) and Modernism (Arnold, forthcoming 2003).