

CONTRIBUTORS

RODNEY BENSON is assistant professor in the Department of Culture and Communication at New York University. He has been a research associate with the Centre de sociologie européenne at the École des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales and taught sociology and international communications at the American University of Paris from 1999 through 2002. His recent articles on the French and American press include: "Bringing the Sociology of Media Back In," Political Communication (forthcoming); "The Political/Literary Model of French Journalism: Change and Continuity in Immigration Coverage, 1973-1991," Journal of European Area Studies 10, 1 (2002); "La logique du profit dans les médias américains," Actes de la recherche en sciences sociales 131-132 (2000); and "Field Theory in Comparative Context: A New Paradigm for Media Studies," Theory and Society 28/3 (June 1999). He is co-editor with Erik Neveu of the forthcoming Bourdieu and the Journalistic Field.

OLIVIER DARD teaches modern history at the University of Metz. He is the author of Le Rendez-vous manqué des relèves des années trente (2002).

SHARIF GEMIE is a Reader in European History and deputy director of the Centre for Border Studies at the University of Glamorgan (Wales, UK). He is currently working on two projects: a cultural history of Breton identity, and an introduction to the history of modern Galicia. His most recent publications include: French Revolutions, 1815-1914: An Introduction (1999); "Anti-Le Pen Protests: France, April-May 2002," Journal of Contemporary European Studies 11, 2 (2003); "Afghanistan, 2001-02: The Land on the Edge of the Future," in Ronald Creagh and Sharif Gemie (eds.), The Shadows Under the Lamp: Essays on September 11 and Afghanistan (2003); "The Politics of Language: Debates and Identities in Contemporary Brittany," French Cultural Studies 13, 2 (2002); and "The Marée Noire, Vintage 1999: Ecology, Regional Identity and Politics in Contemporary France," Modern and Contemporary France 9, 1 (2001).

PIERRE GRÉMION is directeur de recherches émérite at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique à Paris. His published work includes Le Pouvoir périphérique (1977), Paris-Prague (1985), Intelligence de l'anticommunisme (1995), La Plume et la Tribune (2001). He is a regular contributor to Commentaire, Esprit, and Le Débat.

DAPHNE JOSSELIN is a lecturer in International Relations at the London School of Economics and Political Science. She is the author of Money Politics in the New Europe (1997) and co-editor (with Professor William Wallace) of Non-State Actors in World Politics (2001). Recent articles can be found in West European Politics and the Journal of European Public Policy. Her current research interests include the political economy of international monetary integration and debt relief initiatives, and the role of non-state actors in international financial governance.

SOPHIE MEUNIER is a Research Associate in Public and International Affairs at Princeton University, where she teaches on Franco-American relations. She is the author of The French Challenge: Adapting to Globalization (with Philip Gordon, 2001), winner of the 2002 France-Amériques book award. She has published many articles on the European Union, the politics of international trade, globalization, and French politics, and just completed a book manuscript on the EU as an international trade negotiator. An elected member of the Executive Committee of the European Union Studies Association (2003-2007), Meunier contributes frequently to the French media.

SALLY PRICE divides her time between Martinique, which serves as a research base, and Virginia, where she is Dittman Professor of American Studies and Anthropology at the College of William and Mary. She is the author of Co-Wives and Calabashes (1984, winner of the Hamilton Prize in Women's Studies) and Primitive Art in Civilized Places (1991), as well as co-author (with Richard Price) of books on folktales, museum collecting, public folklore, art forgery, African diaspora arts, French Guiana, Afro-American Anthropology, and artist Romare Bearden (forthcoming in French and English). She has lived for extended periods in France and Holland, and was elected to the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences in 2000.

JAMES G. SHIELDS is Senior Lecturer in French Studies at the University of Warwick in England. He specializes in French far-right politics and is the author of The Extreme Right in France: From Pétain to Le Pen (forthcoming). He has written widely on aspects of contemporary France, including the Front National, Gaullism, Poujadism, nationalism and Europeanism, immigration policy, constitutional issues and elections. He has contributed to numerous edited books and published articles in The Political Quarterly, French Politics, Culture & Society, Modern and Contemporary France, Patterns of Prejudice and other journals.