

Notes on the Contributors

David Archard is Reader in Moral Philosophy at the University of St Andrews and Director of the Centre for Ethics, Philosophy and Public Affairs. The most recent of his several books is Sexual Consent (1998), and he is currently working on the law on rape, the relations between children, parents and the state, and the problem of political disagreement.

Pierre Bourdieu held the Chair of Sociology at the Collège de France from 1982 until his death in January of this year, and was also Director of Studies at l'École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales. In his long career spanning half a century, he made an enormous and enduring contribution to modern thought, through works ranging from Reproduction in Education, Society and Culture (with J-C. Passeron) and Homo Academicus through An Invitation to Reflexive Sociology and Distinction to The Rules of Art.

Chantal Mouffe is Professor of Political Theory, and Senior Research Fellow at the Centre for the Study of Democracy, University of Westminster. She is the editor of Gramsci and Marxist Theory (1979) and author of Hegemony and Socialist Strategy (with E. Laclau, 1985), The Return of the Political (1993), and The Democratic Paradox (2000).

Paul Nursey-Bray is Associate Professor in Political Science at the University of Adelaide. His most recent works include Postcolonialism: Culture and Identity in Africa and The Post-Colonial Condition: Contemporary Politics in Africa (both edited with P. Ahluwalia, 1997), and Left Directions: Is There a Third Way? (edited with C. Bacchi, forthcoming).

Thomas Pogge is Associate Professor in Philosophy at Columbia University. His most recent publications are "What We Can Reasonably Reject", NOÛS, 2001; "Eradicating Systemic Poverty", Journal of Human Development, 2001; "Achieving Democracy", Ethics and International Affairs, 2001; “Priorities of Global Justice”, Metaphilosophy, 2001; and “How Should Human Rights be Conceived?”, in Hayden (ed.), The Philosophy of Human Rights (2001).

Adam Sitze is a PhD candidate in the Department of Cultural Studies and Comparative Literature at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities. He has published in Between the Lines (Gaza) and Pretexts (Cape Town).